This week and every week we remember the children of Newtown and too many others across the country and in California where young lives have been taken by gun violence.

Gun-violence prevention is yet another policy area where women political leaders are making a difference and where electing more women could make THE difference.

Assemblymember Nancy Skinner is one of those leaders. And that's why Skinner wrote a law to ban the sale of parts and repair kits that lead to the street production of assault weapons.

To see the difference other women legislators have made, check out the highlights here.

P.S.

A sincere thank you to everyone who participated in and spread the word about our It's Now or (Almost) Never fundraising campaign on Indiegogo. With your help, we blasted past our $7,500 goal and raised $8,900. Thank you!
